

To give birth to a child is something truly beautiful. However, the potential 15 pregnancies a woman can have during her lifetime, are for most women and couples something that requires an element of control. Despite differences in nationality, religion and culture we share a need to control fertility.

Inside these galvanic copper shells, lie objects that carry a history of different women's lives.

These IUDs (Intra Uterine Devices) have been used by over 200 different women and were in use for the combine sum of 687 years.

IUDs are used by over 160 million women worldwide, and are the most widely used contraceptive.
